A Show-down Is Called for!

RIGHT here and now we are going to lay our cards before you . . . and after you see what we have, we are going to request a "show-down" from you. Now is the time when we must face the facts. You with whom we chat each month in this magazine are the University of Dayton men and women who should make the wheels of the Alumni Association go round. You are the ones, therefore, who should face our problems and plan for meeting them.

The financial report, printed herewith, indicates to you that the Alumni Association has been "taking it on the chin" during the last four years—said "chin" being, in more clear terms, the exchequer. Losses can be sustained just so long, and then something drastic has to be done.

It has been done. The salary of the secretary has been cut. The cost of publishing the alumni magazine has been substantially lowered. Economies have been adopted in the alumni office and alumni activities which are calculated to run the Association at the lowest possible expense without sacrificing its effectiveness.

But to operate without loss is the problem. The annual deficits have been heavy burdens on the University of Dayton and the Society of Mary and at the September 23, 1932, meeting of the Alumni Board of Directors we were informed by authorities, both local and provincial, that the "experiment" had gone far enough. Hence, the show-down.

Yes! It is true that our alumni activity under the present modern set-up dates back only to January, 1929. It is also true that we unfortunately bumped into the famous depression of 1929, which, no doubt, has retarded our progress immensely.

On the other hand, it is also true that our usefulness as an Association has been greatly multiplied during the past years. It is with pleasurable results that the alumni office lends itself as a center of college interests. Truly the money spent by the Alumni Association was well spent and brought returns to the University directly or in-

Thirdly—Will you respond and come to the financial assistance of your Association? Is there anything more that can be said in these desperate conditions to get you to contribute voluntarily, generously, and joyously? Are directly. Every activity is directed toward helping the University of Dayton. With all this we are greatly pleased. However, our only concern now is to pull our Association through this crisis and to solve that stupendous task of making our Association financially self-supporting for this year.

First of all—Is an Alumni Association, such as ours, essential and necessary? Other colleges and universities have answered this with an emphatic "YES". Our own University of Dayton agreed on this point—when it offered to help finance the Association for a few years until it became self-supporting.

Secondly—Can the Association be financed by the alumni? Associations of other colleges and universities are being successfully financed by their alumni and our own Association can be placed on a sound financial basis, if we can average $5 per year from only 1000 of our U of D Alumni. Is that impossible?

We realize that money is not everything, but it is quite important. We also realize that many alumni are out of work. We further realize that there are at least 1000 University of Dayton Alumni who can afford to give 10c a week for the good of their Alma Mater—and that they will give if they once grasp the spirit of the whole.

these honest statements that are honest in their intent and their content sufficient to move 1000 U of Daytonians to make a modest donation to your college through our Alumni Fund? If you thoughtfully read them with confidence in their honesty and accuracy, they should suffice. We have placed our cards on the table for all of you to see—and now we kindly request a show-down from you.

YOU KNOW

- that the University of Dayton is affected by the depression;
- that the University of Dayton deserves your support;
- that the Alumni Fund is a reasonably effective way to express your interest and give your support;
- that it must not be said that the U of D Alumni were lacking in spirit, enthusiasm, and generosity;
- that you can afford, if you have an income, to give at least something to our Alumni Fund.

There are the facts. Does not this show-down give sufficient evidence to you that we should win out? The answer lies with you.

So we are "awaiting your answer" . . . and we may be "awaiting your answer" a year from today, if this honest, desperate appeal does not do its job properly.

Rev. W. C. Tredtin Is New University of Dayton President

Father O'Reilly Becomes Director of Alumni and Extension Activities and Regent of Law School

THE University of Dayton Alumni are interested in the changes that have taken place in the University and expect them to result in continued progress. The change brings an alumnus of the University to the presidency. It is also pleasing information to know that the retiring president will remain with the University which he has served so faithfully and with marked success.

Following the annual retreat held this summer at the University, Very Rev. Joseph A. Tetzlaff, S.M., provincial of the Society of Mary in the Cincinnati province, announced the appointment of Rev. Walter C. Tredtin, S.M., native Daytonian and alumnus of the University of Dayton, as president of the University of Dayton to succeed Very Rev. Bernard P. O'Reilly, S.M., who has been president since 1923.

Father Tredtin has been president of Trinity College at Sioux City, Iowa, being the first president there since that institution was taken over by the Society of Mary.

Father O'Reilly will remain at the University of Dayton as director of alumni and extension activities and regent of the law college.

Father Tredtin was educated in Dayton in the elementary schools, and was graduated from the University of Dayton preparatory school and the University itself. He continued his studies at the University of Fribourg, where he was ordained to the priesthood. He celebrated his first mass at Holy Angels church in Dayton. Father Tredtin was a professor at the University of Dayton for several years. He also taught at LaSalle, Illinois; Chicago, Illinois; Beacon, New York, and at Cathedral Latin in Cleveland. As superior at Mount St. John Normal School, he served from August, 1923, until May, 1930, when he was commissioned to negotiate with the Franciscan Fathers at Trinity Junior College, Sioux City, Iowa, for the transfer of college property and right to the Society of Mary.

During the short space of two years that he was president of Trinity College at Sioux City, Iowa, Father Tredtin developed the junior college through all phases of a four-year college and last June conferred on seven graduates the bachelor's degree.

REV. WALTER C. TREDTIN, S.M.

VERY REV. BERNARD P. O'REILLY, S.M.

Father O'Reilly has twice been president of the University of Dayton. He held this office from 1908 to 1918 and again from 1923 until the present time. He was born in Rochester, New York, entering the Society of Mary as a junior candidate when he was sixteen. In 1903, Father O'Reilly was ordained to the priesthood at Paris, France, after having completed his studies in the seminary at St. Mary College, Besancon, France. He was afterwards a professor of English at St. Charles College, St. Brienc, France. He completed his theological studies at the Seminary of the Society of Mary in Paris, France.

Father O'Reilly was professor at the University of Dayton from 1903, after returning from Europe, until 1906, when he was named as vice president. He held this office until 1908, when he became president of the University of Dayton, then known as St. Mary College.

Father O'Reilly became provincial of the Society of Mary in the Cincinnati province in 1918, where he remained until 1923, when he again returned as president of the University of Dayton. He then held the office of president for nine years, which is most unusual. The usual term of office is three years, with a possible second term, which was granted him by his superiors. Then a special indult from the Holy See at Rome was obtained when he began his third three-year term, which he has now completed.

During the time Father O'Reilly has been president at the University, phenomenal growth has been enjoyed. He has been responsible for the erection of the new buildings on the university campus. The unusual growth in enrollment has resulted from his efforts also. From 1908, when he became president of the University, until today the college enrollment has increased over 450 per cent. A student body of over 600 at Chaminade High School in Dayton is also the outgrowth of the preparatory and high school department at the University.

The only buildings used by the University in 1908 were St. Mary Hall, Chaminade Hall, and the old gymnasium. The buildings to the south of the University Chapel were used by the normal school of the Society of Mary.

Progress was made and in 1910, the novitiate was moved to Mount St. John, leaving St. Joseph's Hall to be remodelled to provide private rooms for resident students. The juniorate and scholasticate were removed from the campus in 1916, leaving Nazareth Hall and Zehler Hall for the use of the growing University.

Father O'Reilly, as provincial of the Society of Mary, in 1920 inaugurated the campaign for funds to erect a dormitory building, Alumni Hall, which was completed in 1924. The stadium was next to be erected, being completed in 1925. In 1928 the Albert Emanuel Library, a gift of Victor Emanuel, was completed at the University.

The extensive expansion program which the University of Dayton is in need of at this time in order to develop various departments already existing and others contemplated will be given attention by Father O'Reilly. He will devote the greater part of his time to the realization of these plans. His long association as professor, president, provincial and again as president of the University of Dayton will enable Father O'Reilly to reach all alumni and friends and to interest them in the promotion of a greater University.

The Law School, established in 1922, was one of the special projects in which Father O'Reilly showed untiring interest. The night College of Law was established in 1922 and the day College of Law in 1930. He has been responsible for the establishment of a fine Law Library at the University of Dayton.

Following his appointment, Father Tredtin said:

"For the past nineteen years, under Father O'Reilly, its builder-leader, the University of Dayton has placed first things first. It shall continue to do so.

"I, as new president of the University of Dayton, account myself very fortunate to have Father O'Reilly on the campus. His inspiration and experience will be a guarantee of a more serviceable and more efficient University."

Rev. Walter C. Tredtin, S.M., our new president, has made an excellent reputation and enjoyed outstanding success in the work to which he has dedicated his life. His promotions were rapid, culminating in the presidency of Trinity College at Sioux City, Iowa, which he left to fill the presidency of the University of Dayton.

He succeeds one of the most popular and loved chief executives the University has ever had in the person of the Very Rev. Bernard P. O'Reilly, S.M., under whose administration our University has become one of the prominent educational institutions of the state, with a national reputation for finished scholarship and research work. The retention of Father O'Reilly as director of extension and alumni activities and regent of the Law School is gratifying to all the alumni and to the thousands who have come to know him as a leading educator, an exemplar citizen, and a loyal friend.

Booster Night At U of D

Friday, September 30, the date of the University of Dayton-Adrian football game, was U of D Booster Night, sponsored by the Athletic Committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the city of Dayton.

An elaborate parade was staged in downtown Dayton on the evening of the game. The parade started at Van Cleve Park on Monument avenue and proceeded south on Main street to K street and thence to the University of Dayton stadium for the game. In the parade was the police escort, the colors, the U of D Band, and an official car with Father Tredtin, president of the University; Mayor A. C. McDonald, City Manager Eichelberger, Michael J. Gibbons, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and Henry L. Beigel, Jr., president of the Alumni Association. Following the official car came the members of the Athletic Committee of the Chamber of Commerce. Then came the student marchers, the decorated automobiles, and the other three bands; namely, the Boy Scout Band, the Roosevelt High School Band, and the American Legion Drum Corps. Prizes were awarded between the halves at the game to the owners of the best decorated cars. John Heller, a freshman at the University of Dayton, won the first prize of two football season books. The second prize was won by Robert Bun, a junior student at the U of D. Mark A. Smith, a U of D sophomore, was winner of the third prize of one season book; Irve Libecap, chairman of the Athletic Committee, appointed Paul Schenck, who is recreation director for the city of Dayton, general chairman of the "Booster Night" Committee. Mr. Schenck had working with him Dr. C. E. Davis, Joe Keller, Harry Mack, Leslie Diehl, Joe Odell, and Merle P. Smith.

Women Lawyers' Club Officers

At the meeting of the Dayton Women Lawyers' Club, held on Monday evening, September 12, Lorine Miller, '29, was elected president for the year. Other officers elected were Ernestine Wampler, first vice president; Edith R. Davies, '31, second vice president; Mary Kernan, '30, secretary, and Helen Bowman, treasurer. Plans are under way for an interesting and instructive year under the presidency of Miss Miller.

The College and the Alumni

TODAY the picture of the modern college and its alumni, as compared to that of the old college and its graduates, is so different that it is difficult to discern the new as being an outgrowth of the old. From a position that was sequestered from the world, the college of today has swung into line with national progress. What is being done in the college laboratories and classrooms is of practical use to the nation and has intellectual significance as compared to the lack of public interest in educational work in the halcyon days of the American college. College registration has increased with amazing rapidity. College faculty members are consequently effecting a greater influence and are being called upon more to counsel in the business and industrial and intellectual life of the country. The form of the old traditional classical education has developed steadily into an approach to what our many-sided modern life demands. Collegiate sports are no longer inconspicuous, but they have become today great intercollegiate tournaments, great, clean exhibitions that are demanded by the public and are treated in detail in the daily papers. The alumni of the college have been organized, in associations, in clubs and classes, in moral and financial support of the college and they come back to the old school for the games, commencement, and reunions. The alumni are thinking, talking, and working daily, consciously or unconsciously, as representative agents for their college.

All of this leads to the consideration of what constitutes the modern college. Of what does a university or college of today consist?

In analyzing and diagnosing the set-up of today's college we come to the realization that the colleges must have boards of control. These boards of trustees, depending upon the type of educational institution, are created by the state or by the particular religious denomination or by the particular person or persons who happened to establish the institution. All such boards have their strength and their weaknesses. Boards appointed by the state usually have a political weakness. Those created by a religious denomination are subject to the possibility of a predetermined dogma. A selfish purpose endangers the boards of private institutions. But in all of the Boards there is strength, for without them it would not be possible to have our educational institutions.

A constituent part of the college is the faculty who in many instances represent extreme sacrifice for the furtherance of the cause of education and for the benefit of the nation and posterity.

Of course, there is the student body, which is a crowd of American youths who come to college for a variety of purposes. They must listen to the faculty and try to profit by the lectures, counsel and direction.

Finally, comes the alumni association, which is an organized cooperative body with a view to the advancement of the whole.

In the United States there are approximately six hundred or more colleges and universities and many other institutions of academic tradition sufficiently prominent to class them as educational. Practically every one of them has an organization of graduates which functions more rather than less actively.

Associating a faculty and a student body with a college education is very clear, but what is the purpose of the alumni association? Being considered a constituent part of the college, it would be absurd to say that the association's purpose was simply social, although the social side plays a great part. The smokers, dinners, and dances are of relative importance, because they offer a means for the alumni to gather together—for a mingling of the old and the new . . . The purpose of an alumni association is not only social, but it is also financial, political, athletic, educational, sentimental, and historical.

There is a financial purpose which is part of the duty of the alumni. The purpose is to aid their college financially and to maintain their organization. It would be interesting to know the exact amount of money that the alumni have given or have secured for the colleges in this country. It no doubt would be a surprisingly large amount. Some few statistics are available, however. Figures show that forty-eight educational institutions, excluding Harvard, Yale, and Princeton, whose alumni we know are very generous givers to their alma maters, have received from their alumni over a five-year period the enormous amount of $101,860,058.00. Each and every small college and university in the country has been the recipient of gifts, donations, legacies, or buildings, large or small, from the alumni. It is, however, equally true that nowhere during the present economic illness is alumni support as generous as in the past, nor is it now carried to its fullest logical development. Alumni support is a force that is still finding itself. The financial support of the alumni to the colleges and even to the alumni associations has dropped off considerably during the past few years, due to the worldwide economic and financial upheaval. Alumni support in these times has reached a plateau where it is forced to rest, but with the return to normal conditions it will carry on, reaching higher peaks.

There is a political purpose, especially for the alumni associations of the state institutions. The duty of the alumni also enters into the realm of athletics. The alumni association should boost the athletic program of the college so that in all ways athletics will be on a sound financial basis for the benefit of the school and the athletes. This can be done and is done not only by attending and cheering at the individual athletic contests, but also by being an advocate of clean sport and stimulating interest in the contests. Yes, there is an educational purpose. The alumni should promulgate the truths imparted to them at their colleges. And there is a possibility that the institution should continue to educate its alumni through the alumni association. Is the purpose sentimental? It is partially. Sentiment is a great factor in keeping together the alumni association of a college. The purpose of the alumni association is also, partially, historical. Forming a part of the historical background of the educational institution is the alumni association and its records.

But after all this analyzing the main purpose of an alumni association is more than each of these—it is actually a combination of all. Through all of these purposes or functions the alumni associations of the various colleges and universities seek to benefit and they are aiding the educational institutions so that their search for the truth may be unceasing and that the ideals of these educational institutions may be fulfilled.

An Unexplored World

THE explorations of Stanley and Livingstone in the Dark Continent led to a mad scramble for empire on the part of the European countries in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. Since that time, Africa has been explored and exploited; other countries, considered as backward by the so-called civilized countries, met the same fate in turn. Today, even the polar regions are being charted with great detail. Hardly a spot on earth has not been traversed by man. This does not mean to imply that little remains to be done in the field of exploration, but that it is merely a question of time when science will overcome most of the obstacles that hinder man from covering the face of the earth.

We marvel at achievements on land and sea and in the air. By his inventive genius, man is always making the world a more comfortable place to live in. This incessant preoccupation with the external world, with the things of sense, with activity of an objective nature, tends to distract man and lead him too far away from the world within him, the world of thought, the world of spirit. Too much concern about material welfare is detrimental to deep thought and for this reason America has developed few thinkers who have left the impress of their genius upon the world.

Even the man who glories in a college education, who has therefore received opportunities for intellectual development, may find that he is poor company for himself; he may be afraid of his own thoughts, and so turns to outward activity. Progress is not through mere feverish action; mill-wheels which are not given any grist, grind each other to no purpose. The mind also must be fed to be activated; in the final analysis, it is the thinkers who are the movers of the world.

Self is largely an unexplored world for the majority of individuals. Whether Pope was right or not when he said, "The proper study of mankind is man," may be a matter of contention. Such a study, at any rate, is one of the most fascinating. Unfortunately, modern psychology which purposes to investigate human behavior too frequently regards man merely as an assemblage of nervous reactions to external stimuli. By placing man practically on a level with the brute creation it hopes to be able to predict and control human behavior. There is, however, a spiritual element which constantly eludes scientific diagnosis or reduction to rule. For this reason the modern psychologist will unscientifically ignore it as though it were non-existent. The true knowledge of man must embrace the whole man, both the spiritual, as well as the material element.

Perhaps we are not concerned with the academic aspects of psychology; very probably, without realizing it, we do concern ourselves with its practical applications. If we wish to get the maximum out of our lives, we must resist the tendency to extroversion by at least occasional serious reflection, which is engendered and developed by serious reading and serious conversation. We shall find that we have much to learn about ourselves; we shall experience a novel sensation, the thrill of discovery, in undertaking the work of self-analysis like a Columbus sailing to a terra incognita over unknown seas. A life-time will seem all too short to accomplish the gigantic achievement of self-knowledge. Ancient Greek philosophers felt themselves justified in summing up their whole philosophy of life in the two words Know Thyself.

Some may conclude that such analysis of self will lead to morbidity or self-consciousness, or even a sort of pessimism. In isolated instances there may be danger of exaggerated self-concentration, but for most men this danger is quite remote, since introspection demands a modicum of intelligence and sustained effort.

In such a process of self-investigation, the work and the results may seem intangible, and yet it is of vital importance for all who are by training and education constituted leaders in their communities that they recognize their own capacities, as well as their deficiencies. Men have proved to be failures in their particular walk of life because they refused to recognize the weaknesses of their character or exaggerated their abilities. Others, on the contrary, understood their capacities, developed them and exploited them to the full and became splendid assets to their communities.

It would be worth our while to take as our own the Greek motto, Know Thyself. One thing is certain: we shall be surprised at the vastness of the world which such an investigation will open for us.

With this issue the ALUMNUS begins its fifth year. It is our sincere desire that in each number throughout the year we may be able to present news of the University of Dayton and of the alumni that will be of deep interest to all. In the meantime, make your plans to return for Homecoming on November 5. There will be an interesting program and we want you to share in it.

UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON FLYERS

Flyers Are the Class of Ohio This Season

Consensus of Opinion that U of D
Has Perfect Grid Machine

BY MASON C. BENNER, '32

EACH year, through a natural sense of loyalty and sometimes with tongue in cheek, the local adherents of any school feel called upon to announce with pardonable pride that the home team is the most powerful team ever produced at the dear old alma mater. Nevertheless, this year, we at the University of Dayton, dauntless of being trite, despite pardonable pride, and with no fear of the veracity of our statement, wish to announce to the press, the public and especially the alumni that Harry Baujan has produced a football machine that has no peer in the land in its class, and the only ones out of its class are such teams that rank on a par with Notre Dame, Army, Ohio State, Dartmouth, and the like.

This announcement does not come as a bolt from the blue for anyone who has been following the Flyers during the past three seasons. Harry has been molding this year's machine all during this period. Starting several years ago with a team comprising mostly promising sophomores, such as Scotty Fearn, George Gorry, Dan Fitzsimmons, Johnny Bauer, John Medley, Marty Schnur, Hank Meyer, Shine Cleary, Whitey Cramer, Bernard Brisse, and others, Baujan has been molding a perfect running machine, adding other stars, such as Bob Payne, Paul Pienning, Gene Rodgers, Dan Gill, Ed Howe, Tom Hannegan, and Jim McCarthy as he went along.

For the aforementioned group this is the third season under fire together. With their natural ability and under the tutelage of Coaches Baujan, Belanich, and Kiefer their experience has molded them into as smooth a running unit as you would ever expect to see on any gridiron. Of course, other elements enter into the completion of an undefeated season besides the excellence of material, but barring such unforeseen circumstances as injuries, playing conditions, or off-nights (it used to be off-days), the Flyers are better than a fifty-fifty bet to win all this season's games.

Thus far the Flyers have won three regular games and turned around to demonstrate just how strong their reserve material was by sending the second team over to beat Wilmington, an old rival that used to regularly adorn the schedule of the first eleven. Findlay College, the pride of the Northwest Conference, was the victim in the opener, and they died hard under the Red and Blue avalanche by a 33-to-0 score. Just to show that they are no ordinary pushover, Findlay came back the next week to hold the Student Princes of Heidelberg to a 0-to-0 tie. Next, Adrian College of Adrian, Mich., came here after losing to John Carroll by about four touchdowns and were completely smothered by the varsity, 64 to 0. Then, just to show further the comparative strength of the Flyers, John Carroll only beat Wittenberg 7 to 6 last week, and the Lutherans will furnish the opposition here Thanksgiving Day. The brilliant 21-to-14 victory over the strong U. S. Marines proved the strength of the Flyers. So, if you don't agree with me, draw your own conclusions.

Thus far, Dayton's starting eleven has been: Ends, J. McCarthy and Payne; tackles, Medley and Meyer; guards, Bauer and Howe; center, Cleary; quarter, Fitzsimmons or Gill; halves, Gorry and Fearn; fullback, Schnur. The reserves lined up: Ends, Rapier and Bagdonis; tackles, Kawka and Kelly; guards, Pozelnik and Brisse; center, Brandel; quarter, A. McCarthy; halves, Armbruster and McFadden, and fullback, Cramer.

Findlay Given Football Lesson

Before a surprisingly large opening-night crowd, the University of Dayton Flyers gave an inkling of what may be expected from them on this gridiron this year by giving Stuart Holcomb's (former Ohio State star) Findlay College eleven a lesson in how the game of football really should be played, running up 33 points while the up-staters fought hard to no avail.

The Baujanites naturally did not uncork a variety of fancy plays, but their powerful machine was seldom stopped for any length of time, and when their fleet backs broke loose there was no stopping them until the goal had been reached. This was notably the case when two substitutes, Tommy Hannegan and Joe McFadden, came through with an 80- and a 63-yard sprint, respectively.

The balance of the scoring came about through the efforts of Fearn, Payne and Gill, and a safety on Findlay's part. Fearn flipped a neat 15-yard pass to Payne on the fourth down for a touchdown, and later tore around end to mark up a counter himself. Hannegan, Dayton's mightiest mite, also contributed another on a quick opening play off tackle. Danny Gill contributed the only point after touchdown with a place kick. Blauvelt of Findlay downed the ball for a safety back of his own goal line after a bad pass from center.

The game showed that the Flyers have a surplus of star backs, and if the line measures up to standard in the tougher contests the Dayton boys are in.

— U of D —

Quick, the Adding Machine! Dayton 64, Adrian 0

It looks as if the sawbones did a good job on George Gorry's knee. Out of the eight times he carried the ball for the Flyers against Adrian's unwieldy huskies, he scored four touchdowns. Shades of Ducky Swan! What a man!

Tommy Hannegan contributed two touchdowns again, as did Whitey Cramer. Fitzsimmons and Hoefling contributed one apiece. Danny Gill kicked three dropkicks and Gorry also doubled in brass by kicking a place kick for the points after the touchdowns. That was all of the scoring.

Adrian never threatened and were hopelessly outclassed throughout the contest. Dayton made 30 first downs to Adrian's 3 and the visitors made but 16 yards by rushing the ball, while losing 15. That's the story.

The entire Flyer squad looked good and were fortunate to dodge any injuries which would handicap them in the contest of the year with the U. S. Marines.

Flyers Prove Strength Against Marines

After chalking up two easy early-season victories, the Flyers figured to run into a tough battle when they faced the "Devil Dogs", and they got exactly what they were looking for.

If there was any doubt as to the strength of the Hilltoppers it certainly was dismissed after the Marine contest, which proved that the Flyers is a crew that will prove tough for any crew to handle. U of D scored two touchdowns in the first half, as against one in each half for the Marines.

The 21-to-14 victory of the Flyers was a well-deserved win, and Harry Baujan's outfit looked strong in all departments. As for the Marines, the lads from Quantico fought like true warriors, but they simply were not good enough. Statistics show that each club made 15 first downs, but the Flyers outgained the Marines, 253 yards to 129. The Leathernecks threw 22 passes and completed 11 for 99 yards, while the Flyers tossed eight and made three good for 33 yards. Coming out of the game with no injuries, the Red and Blue pigskin artists are now preparing, as we go to press, to tackle the Xavier Musketeers on Friday night, October 14, at Cincinnati, for the Governor Cooper Cup.

The Roll Call (Continued)

THE following alumni have loyally responded to our appeal for funds during the summer months. Contributions have been received from each of the alumni listed below. ### Holy Name Rally in U of D Stadium

One of the most successful Holy Name rallies was held in the University of Dayton stadium on Sunday afternoon, October 9, with an attendance of close to ten thousand people. There was a short procession of the Holy Name men. The procession was formed on Rubicon street and the intersecting streets. The students of the University assembled on L street with the University of Dayton Band. The line of march was from Brown, at L street, to Alberta, to Caldwell, to the stadium. The procession began promptly at 2:30 p. m. The president of the University, Rev. Walter Tredtin, S.M., gave the address of the day. Monsignor Buckley of Springfield also spoke and officiated at the religious exercises. The entire assemblage joined in the singing of the hymns.

Cincinnati Club Meets Nov. 15

The officers and few of the members of the University of Dayton Alumni Club held a preliminary meeting at the Hotel Sinton on September 29, 1932, to plan for the migration trip on October 14, and also to plan for a large meeting of the entire Cincinnati Club, at which meeting the election of officers for the club will take place, and Father Tredtin, the new president of the U of D, will be presented. It was decided to hold this club meeting on Tuesday, November 15, at the residence of Edwin G. Becker at the southeast corner of Dana avenue and Victory parkway at 8 p.m.

"You're telling ME they're Milder?"

IF YOUR cigarette is mild—that is, not strong, not bitter, but smokes cool and smooth—then you like it.

If your cigarette tastes right; if it tastes better—that is, not oversweet; and if it has a pleasing aroma—then you enjoy it the more.

Everything known to Science is used to make Chesterfield Cigarettes milder and taste better.

The right kinds of leaf tobacco—American and Turkish—are blended and cross-blended. That's why "They Satisfy."
